The art of negotiation and how to influence to get what you want. (Smart negotiators seem to make the world magically adapt to them: earning respect, making themselves heard, and collaboratively influencing people, priorities, projects, and outcomes for the benefit of all.)

15:00 REFRESHMENTS
15:30 Panel Discussion 4: Building your Internal and External Networks

Building and maintaining a strong network is not only critical to moving forward in your career, it is also key to your professional stability and survival. Networks provide you with access to private information that you can't find elsewhere, giving you competitive advantage. Networks also enable you to access diverse skill sets to enhance your work performance. And long term professional relationships are the number one way to open doors to new job opportunities.

In this session, panelists will share their experience building their own networks and answer questions such as:

- Who are the right people for my network?
- What are the best tools and techniques for effective networking?
- How do I improve my networking skills and forge better connections?
- How do I add value to others and create win/win relationships?
